The Daily Press, HONGKONG, MARCH 15TH, 1890.

In the article from the Times reproduced in another column Hongkong is referred to as a Colony not yet old enough to celebrate its jubilee. But we are rapidly approaching the age necessary for that purpose. The island was taken possession of in January, 1841, but it was not until 1843 that it was erected into a Colony. It is a question therefore whether the celebration of the jubilee should take place in 1891 or 1893. We have no hesitation in saying the earlier date ought to be selected. The settlement of the island commenced in the year in which it was taken possession of, the earliest land titles date back to that year, and the progress of the settlement was continuous from the time the first brick was laid. The change which took place in 1842 was simply a determination of the form of Government for the new Colony, but Hongkong was to all intents and purposes a Colony before that date and was commonly so spoken of. It is, we take it, the foundation of the Colony that should be celebrated by a jubilee, and that undoubtedly dates from 1841. If for any reason it be found inconvenient to hold the celebration next year, 1893 would not be a good year.

In our report yesterday of the East Borodelling Company's meeting, Mr. Stow spoke of having said "many estates are returning 40 per cent. dividend to the shareholders" for this year. The presentation of the chief inspector being also present. The set of gallantry for which this medal has been awarded took place in November last, when the constable, who was then stationed in the Estate 1st District, swam off from the Praia East to a sampan which had capsized in the harbour, and succeeded in saving the lives of a woman and two children.

The following is translated by the Military Gazette of a native paper:—A native and a foreign inspector of mines were nearly coming to grief in Sin Kok Chong through a misunderstanding with the country people of the locality. They had been sent by the Vice-regal Chang to inspect the coal and iron mines there, but the people mistook their object, and thought they were missionaries looking for a site to build a church. General Chang sent a note to the British Consul, and requested him to speak to the Chinese authorities. The Chinese, however, did not understand English, and the British Consul, who was then in the town, sent a note to the Chinese Consul, who, in turn, sent a note to the Chinese Consul, who was then in the town, who strengthed the view that there was no partnership, and he therefore gave judgment for the defendant with costs.

We are requested to state that owing to the inclemency of the weather there will be no cricket to day.

Count Okuma, we read in a Japan coutume, is now able, with the support of a cane, to walk in his garden.

Mr. W. H. Goodman, the new Attorney-General, is a passenger by the P. M. steamer City of Rio de Janeiro, which is due here to-day.

The Singapore Free Press hears that a syndicate has been formed at Peangau to investigate the possibility of forming a company for the electric lighting of that town.

Mr. F. Von Zander, the interpreter of the German Legation, has the Japan Gazette says he has been ordered to act in place of the German Consul at Kobe, who recently went home on leave.

The following is translated by the Military Gazette of a native paper:—The Emperor restored to the Temple of Heaven on the 8th and returned to the Palace the following morning. He did not sacrifice for a blessing on the year at the burn pavilion, where was expected, but at the southern altar, where the Supreme Being was worshipped by the white robes. The Emperor did not partake of any temporary structure built up for the occasion. The wood for the building was brought from the forest of the old way. Thus there was no partnership, and he therefore gave judgment for the defendant with costs.

From Japanese papers we learn that an attempt was recently made on the life of General Viscount Tokuji. The would-be assassin was two, but the General had them hit and run, and they fled to the police and escaped without injury. Viscount Tokuji is the leader of the Independent Conservative Party.

The steamer Cheng Hoa Kian, which arrived a Malay seaman, was captured by the crew of the ship, and was wounded, but he failed to catch him. The ship was wounded, but nothing more was seen of the unfortunate man and the sea was too high and confused to launch a boat.

The railway between Taiping and Saitung, which had been closed for repairs, has been reduced with infinitely greater rapidity by medicines especially contrived for the purpose and with greater accuracy, too, in the proportions of the various ingredients employed. No form of medication can be better than a pill, provided only it is intelligently prepared. But right here occurs the difficulty. Just as it may seem to make a pill, or a million of them there are really very few pills that can be generally recommended for popular use. Most of them either underdo or overshoot the mark. As everybody takes pills of some kind, it may be well to mention what's good, safe, and reliable. It should be known, when one feels dull and sleepy, and has more or less pain in the head-sides, and back, he may be sure his bowels are constipated, and his liver sluggish. In this unhappy state of things there is nothing like a good cathartic pill. It will act like a charm by stimulating the liver into doing its duty, and ridding the digestive organs of the accumulated poisonous matter.

But the good pill does not grip and pain us, neither does it make us sick and miserable for a few hours or a whole day. It sets on the entire glandular system at the same time, like the after-effects of the pill will not worse than the disease itself. The griping caused by most pills is the result of irritating drugs which they contain. Such pills are harmful, and should never be used. They sometimes even produce hemorrhoids. Without having any particular desire, therefore, Mother Soigel's Pills, manufactured by the well-known house of A. J. White, Limited, 35, Farringdon Road, London, and now sold by all chemists and medicine vendors, as the only one we know of that actually possesses every desirable quality. They remove the pressure upon the brain, correct the liver, and cause the bowels to act with ease and regularity. They never grip or produce the slightest sickness of the stomach, or any other unpleasant feeling, or symptom. Neither do they induce further constipation, as nearly all other pills do. As a further and crowning merit, Mother Soigel's Pills are covered with a tasteless and harmless coating, which causes them to resemble pearls, thus rendering them as pleasant to the palate as they are effective in curing disease. If you have a severe cold and are threatened with a fever, a dose of Soigel's Pills will effect a speedy cure. Often times partially decayed food in the stomach and bowels produces sickness, nausea, &c. Cleanse the bowels with a dose of these pills, and good health will follow.

Use these kinds of pills, they do not make you feel worse before you are better. They are, without doubt, the best family physic ever discovered. They remove all obstructions to the natural functions in either sex without any unpleasant effects.

CHAPTER XXXI.

And this loving act the grove
Too much the way of loathing."

Very slowly Mr. Blake ascended the staircase to board this now found shelter in his own drawing-room. A most unlively task. The new-found ease, peeling up and down the room with rapid steps, and raging impatience in her beautiful face, made him sit.

"Well, have you been off on an earlier train?" demands she.

"No, no, my dear, I am afraid you must wait until the evening."

"Has he gone away?" "Yes, he has, up in her rapier-wait to and fro in the hall-and-tormented room, to seek this, evidently all-important question.

"What's that?" asks Mr. Blake again. "And considering all things, perhaps it would be as well that he should not go?"

"What things?" sharply.

"Now, now, be calm; pray be calm," says Mr. Blake. "With time we shall be able to go into everything. You will pardon my saying it, but you seem to me to be desirably wanting in tranquillity."

"I am not so bad," says the girl, smiling.

"I am sorry, but the truth is that you will be concerned," arises this same girl, a very decided little noise upon the carpet with her foot.

"Do you mean to say you have come here only to say that?" As to his going, I hope he will go once and for ever."

"Well, I entreat you to sit down," says Mr. Blake. "That little position is always conducive to repose, but of course, it is necessary that you should be comfortable. I start the subject in my mind. The very objectionable manner in which you now treat the room, has the effect of—reducing my wind almost to a jolly."

Miss Delaney, stopping short in her parambulation, arrives him steadily.

"Please, let me speak to you easily, as it is hard to mind what is the mournful past," says Mr. Blake. "You are her brother, I think?" She may have meant nothing, but this wind-up to the original remark is to say the least of it, unfortunately.

"Yes," says Mr. Blake grimly. "And now sit down if you please; you can more easily still, and let me explain to you one or two things which you appear to be remarkably ignorant of."

He explains the one or two things in a manner all his own, leaving Nan as surprised as who at the end was at the beginning of his discourse. That Hume wants to marry her is the one thing clear, but after all she had known that a long time ago. Such a long time! It seems to her as though many years had elapsed since her enforced flight over the water between Ireland and England—between the hour she had first proposed to her, and this.

"He is most sincerely in earnest. He really desires to marry you; and his settlements—his settlements are magnificient—magnificent!" says Mr. Blake, raising his hands. He feels beat on bringing this unpleasant business to a propitious conclusion.

"Magnificent!" Bother his settlements?" says Miss Delaney, with a stammering vehemence. She has pushed back her hair, and stands facing her uncle with anger in her eyes. "Do you think I care about settlements?"

"Not care—not care about—; you are a dreadful girl," says Mr. Blake with the utmost plausibility, and yet rather at a slight hurricane had arisen to blow away his breath. "Shocking—shocking. Really, you know, if your aunt heard you, she would be shocked indeed. And as for Lulu—she is as thankful Lydia was of prudence. The immaculate Lydia is his daughter." "The whole affair is so irregular, so—so indecent to put it mildly," that—"

"Pouf!" says Miss Delaney, turning a truly turgidnesses shoulder. "You have lived too long out of Ireland, uncle! You have forgotten to separate the accidents from the incidents."

"You seem to have forgotten something," says Mr. Blake, quite smirking for him. "The accident is what Mr. Hume bases his defence upon, and—"

"Don't mention him," cries she with a frown. "He has nothing to do with anything accidental. He is a despatch of the deepest despatch!"

"Well, you won't hear his stories," says Mr. Blake decidedly. "I am bound to be, indeed, to doubt his sincerity. That unfortunate—"
